

YOUNG WOMEN MAY AVOID PAIN

Need Only Trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, says Mrs. Kurtzweg.

Buffalo, N.Y.—"My daughter, whose picture is herewith, was much troubled with pains in her back and sides every month and they would sometimes be so bad that it would seem like acute inflammation of some organ. She read your advertisement in the newspapers and tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She praises it highly as she has been relieved of all these pains by its use. All mothers should know of this remedy, and all young girls who suffer should try it."—Mrs. MATILDA KURTZWEG, 529 High St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Young women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

If you know of any young woman who is sick and needs helpful advice, ask her to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Only women will receive her letter, and it will be held in strictest confidence.

CO-OPERATIVE CATTLE SALES.

Good Prices in Home Markets Encourage Raising Pure-Bred Stock.

Annual co-operative cattle sales, organized by the South Carolina state college of agriculture and the United States department of agriculture, have been successful in increasing the number of South Carolina farmers who feed out cattle during the winter.

These sales, the first of which was held two years ago, have furnished proof, it is said, that if they can be assured of a market when they have finished their cattle, farmers will feed cattle on cottonseed meal and hulls, silage, and other southern feeds.

As a preliminary to the co-operative sale, the farmers in a community are asked to state what number of cattle each will feed. The date for the sale is then set so that each farmer knows when he begins to feed his cattle the time at which they must be ready for market. The feeding is done with this date in mind. The day of the sale is announced through letters, newspapers, etc., and every effort is made to attract as large a number of buyers as possible. As a matter of fact, the day is usually a gala occasion and farmers come in from a wide radius.

The sale itself is conducted in much the same manner in which cattle are sold in the large markets. This year cattle were sold in two places, a total of 265 being disposed of. These averaged in weight close to 800 pounds and sold for an average of $6.39 per hundred pounds. The top price was 9 cents a pound, which was brought by a bunch of seven head of steers averaging almost 1,100 pounds each. The fact that steers raised in South Carolina could sell for $125 a head in a home market made a distinct impression on the farmers present. The other prices and weights also averaged higher than last year. This is regarded as conclusive evidence that if a market can be provided farmers readily will improve their methods of cattle feeding and breeding.

An instructive object lesson in the value of these improved methods is afforded by the contrast between the different types of cattle sold at these sales. One man may be compelled to dispose of a bunch of native scrubs for 5 cents a pound, while his neighbor who purchased a purebred beef bull three years ago sells a load of half-bred calves from his $200 bull for 85 cents. In such a case it usually happens that a farmer who has brought the scrubs to market adds his name before the day is over to the list of men who have agreed to buy purebred beef bulls on a co-operative plan.

At the present time the majority of cattle sold at these sales are fed by farmers who know comparatively little about cattle feeding. For this reason the specialists employed by the department and the state college of agriculture make a practice of visiting the men engaged in the work and advising them about their various problems. They not only aid in planning the work, but in making up rations, changing feeds, finishing, etc. As a result of this activity, it is stated that the demand for purebred cattle in South Carolina is now greater than ever before in the history of the state.
